AFFECTIONATELY YOURS

Dear Editors:

In your August 1961 issue, I noted with interest the article on Jane and Gus Root ("Life is an Adventure to Be Lived" from "Young Homemakers in a Changing World LIVING". Cross-Country Tour of Homes"). We have about nine years more to go before our house will resemble the Root".

We have five lovely children, and it became harder and harder to find an understanding landlord, even in our village of Enfield. The children wanted room to run, trees to climb, and animals. My busband and I wanted to put the $14 we were paying every week on rent into somebring that would one day be ours. We had no financial reserves that we could have used as a downparment, so we drove around the countryside looking for an old house that we hoped to buy cheap and without a downpayment.

On Jones Hill, overlooking beautiful Lake Mascoma and the village of Enfield, we found it—an old oneroom schoolhouse, built in 1836, 24 by 26 feet, made with homemade nais and hand-hewn beams and with floor boards two feet wide.

We talked to the owner and two days later we had a deed which stated that Donald and Gisela Sharkey were the owners of the above mentioned schoolhouse, plus 12 acres of surrounding fields and timber, for the sum of $1,200, to be paid in monthly installments of $20.

After washing the place, we all moved in in June 1980. There was no water, no bathroom (we still don't have an indoor bathroom), and the wiring was inadequate for my electric range. So a friend of ours wired the house for us (he's an electrician), and in return, my hubband built a chimney for him; cost to either, nil.

Then we hired someone to dig a well, which was 50 feet from the house, 14 feet deep, 8 feet wide, and cost $15. My husband, God love him, is a genius at stone and brickwork and just about everything else he does, so he laid the well up while the children and I lugged fieldstone and mixed the mortar.

Came winter, and we had water in the house. We also insulated the whole house, including the attic floor, and put up wallboard. As you know, it gets quite cold up here in the wintertime.

Like the Root family, we did not want to go into debt and realize that it will take us six to seven years before we have the house the way we want it. There will be an addition, 24 by 26 feet, with a family room downstairs, and the kitchen, dining room, and living room with fireplace upstairs. The part we live in now (we partitioned two bedrooms off and use the remainder as kitchen and living room will be all bedrooms and bathroom.

After 11 years of marriage, 1 finally have a refrigerator. We paid $15 for it, had some gas put in, and it works well. My range was given to me five years ago and, although it is not the latest model, it works fine and bakes beautiful cakes. Our TV is a used model, which we bought for $35, and we have only had to put in a $3 audio tube. In time, we will replace these appliances with new ones.

I don't really feel cheated because I don't have a push-button home. On the contrary, our working together on our home has brought our family much closer, and we have fun by cooking chicken on the barbecue in the field behind the house. Our three goats supply us with milk, and our heas give us all the eggs we need. My husband makes $78 a week as a construction worker. I would describe our house at present as "Early Dump" because a lot of things come from the dump, where my husband found a nice sink, all my pine cupboards, some chairs, and so on.

war-bride, and can't for the life of me understand why someone would throw away perfectly good wood, sinks, and other articles that someone can put to good use.

There are a lot of New Yorkers up here right now, and they take walks by our house. They talk to me (often in German, as many of them are from Germany) and they just can't understand how I can live up here in the winter. It is true that it does get cold, and no matter which direction you come from, in order to get to our house, you have to go up steep hills. But even winter has its beauty up here. Spring is apt to come with a rush, summer is hot but breezy, and the nicest season of all is fall, when the maples turn and we can see Rutland Mountain in Vermont on a clear day. There is nothing hectic up here, It is peaceful and beautiful, and I love it.

I am so grateful that our children are healthy and happy, grateful that I married such a grand guy who loves me and the children and shows it by painting me a picture of the valley or by bringing me a bouquet of black-eyed Susans or by just being himself. I like my neighbors (a half-mile down the road) and I love your magazine, which gives us such wonderful ideas for our house.

If you are ever up this way, please drop in for a cup of coffee and some hot cinnamon rolls. You will be most welcome.

Mrs. Gisela Sharkey Enfield, New Hampshire

THE CREATIVE INSTINCT Dear Editors:

I enjoy your magazine very much, particularly the craft series (on collage in February 1961, hooked rugs in April 1961, stained glass in May 1961, batik in June 1961, and sand casting in July 1961).

I would very much like to see you do an article on quilts and quilt making. More women than you think still make quilts. For a hundred years or so it was a necessity but also a very real form of entertainment - a hobby, a social event (quilting bee), and a way of being creative that was open to women in those times.

Although the necessity in gone, there is still a fascination in quit making, in the history of the old patterns, and certainly a real man of achievement in creating with your own hands something been tiful and useful for your home.

Mrs. T. J. Conlon San Diego, California

WHAT'S NEW

Dear Editors:

Even though your publication is edited to fit the needs and interests of the present generation, while we are still "young in heart," we continue to find it of absorbing interes and look forward to each issue, One of the features we like most is the "What's Newfor LIVING" department. In other words, despite the healthful qualities attributed to J. F.K. rockers, we can't sit still that long and like your way of keeping us abreast of what's new.

Oscar L. Westgate Pittsford, New York

PROMISING PASTIME

Dear Sirs:

Your magazine is very popular among the American and European communities. I saw in your June 1961 issue a method of preserving rose petals and forming them into beads ("In Your Garden"), but 1 have misplaced this article. If you could send me a copy of the instructions I would appreciate it, for one has time here to make such things.

COLORFUL COMMENTS

Dear Editors: Your magazine has been a favorite in helping me decorate my home. So many people, when decorating, use color so timidly that their homes are neutral and understated as to color combinations, I was amused recently when a neighbor shook her head disapprovingly when viewing our freshly decorated bedroom and said that it was a "bold" color scheme. Please continue to educate us concerning color and show what glorious and subtle tones can be used together. Mrs. Thomas E. Helston

A potpourri of special pointers

by JEAN HERSEY

The world has come again to frost and fires, And hearths are warm. December evening spills lie silence and the peace of darkness folds On quiet houses under quiet hills.

Holly is a house plant too. A special English holly (Its Burfordii) with almost spineless deep green, glossy leaves gross as a potted plant in your window. When only 12 to 15 instatall, it produces clusters of delightful scarlet berries that main fresh and colorful for weeks. Grow in partial shade, no a cool window, and keep on the dry side. Holly is a fine holling gift, happy as a lark to spend its summers in the gardes.

Green grows that sunless window! Here are half a disaphants that grow happily with not one ray of sunshine. To be their best, however, all need good light. Philodendron as heart-shaped leaves smooth to touch; peperomia has one leaves interestingly marked; dieffenbachia has large, soft bliage spotted or feathered cream, white, or yellow. Choose the tiny-leaved ivy—such an assortment, and all easy to propagate from cuttings. The Holly Fern with jagged pointed follow suggests its namesake. Arrowhead Nephthytis comes for faraway West Africa and has interesting arrow-shaped leaves.

Rospheries need you now. Prune, taking out all deal wood, which snaps readily at ground level. Trim back remaining canes to four feet. (In March, for abundance of fruit, or out one cane in three and trim back to two feet.) Always as sharp clippers and a clean cut. At the University of Kentack, experimenting agriculturists found that, when they used a sadust mulch, they got one third more raspberries than what they used no mulch. And sawdust was better than any other mulch. Settle a four-inch layer over the earth between plans now. At a naw mill, sawdust costs about 10 cents for a burne bag. If you live near a mill, do take advantage of it. Woo chips are also excellent. By spring, chips and sawdust will have started to rot and will be even more valuable to your garden.

Christmas cactus for you and your friends. This plant (Zygocactus truncatus) is often called the Crab Cactus; it trails scarlet flowers from the tip ends of flat green foliage for the holidays. For an abundance of flowers, water yours a little daily from now to Christmas, fertilize every week, until bud appear, and then stop. These plants make fine presents. Buy several now and have the fun of watching them develop until the time comes to give them away to your pet cactus fass.

The Touch of Creslan...the fiber with the Six Senses of Fashion

Now . . at last . . the first complete picture map of the Civil War—as broatstaking and as magnificant as any map over designed. All the pageantry and splinarry of that gist struggle is speed across the SEVEN SQUARE FEET of this giant wait map.

SHOWS NEARLY 100 CAMPAIGNS

Nearly 100 places, events and campaigns of decisive importance are pimointed and numbered on the map, and a special guide lists the dates and complete information on each. It's a treasure trave of fast-on the C'tvil War, accurately and beautifully pre-sented.

PRINTED IN BRILLIANT 4-COLOR

The facts are presented against a background of brilliant four-color. A glarner tells where the "Blues" and the "Grays" fought, and the other colors brighten the map, make it easy to read, ideal for framing.

INCLUBES & SIDE PAINTINGS

Some of the major events of this strengtle are high-lighted in individual oil paintings that provide a vivid horder for the map. They include: 1. A full-length pottrait of Stonewall Jackson during his Valley Campaign of Mas-Jone,

- 2. Grant's siege of Vicksburg, May 18-Join 4, 1863.
- 3. The war at sea. The Alabama under Con-federate Admiral Semmes sunk by Kearage off France, June 10, 1861.
- 4. Portrait of Sheridan on his favorite mount during the Shenandoan Valley campaign, Amount October, 1864.
- Opening bendurdment of Fort Samter, April 12-13, 1861.
- Rattles of Bull Bun-Manassas, Jone 21, 1861 and the 2nd Battle, August 27 September 1, 1862.
- 7. Battle of Gettysburg, July 1-3, 1863,
- Appenditor-Lee and Grant signing sur-render at McLean House, April 9, 1865.

And in addition to each of these paintings (all in bright, full color), there are full length paintings of I mion and Rebei soliders, showing their uniforms and correct equipment in fine detail.

Used by Schools, Colleges and Libraries

Thousands have been sold all over the United States, many just to individuals interested in the 'Feit War, many to collectors, but also theusands to schools, colleges and libraries for use in teaching, for refer-ence work and for prizes (well worth framing).

Created by Gressel & Dunlay One of America's Leading Publishers

You save more than money. You help save the peace. What would their future be without it? The answer is the reason so many Americans buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

How to save $100 when you have only $75

With U. S. Savings Bonds, you'll find it a lot easier to reach your savings goal. For example, to save $1,000, simply put $750 into Series E Bonds. You can do this because you get $4 back at maturity for every $3 you put into Savings Bonds. And if you keep them 10 years past maturity, you'll get an extra $1.80 back, a total return of $5.80 on your $3 investment.

Six good reasons to buy and hold Savings Bonds

 You can save automatically on Payroll Savings or buy Bonds at your bank.

2. You now earn $3\frac{1}{4}\%$ to maturity, $\frac{1}{2}\%$ more than ever before.

3. You invest without risk under a U. S. Government guarantee.

 Your Bonds are replaced free if lost or stolen.

You can get your money with interest any time you need it.

You save more than money
 —you buy shares in a stronger America.

Growth or income—take your choice. E. Bonds grow one-third bigger in 74 years. H Bonds interest comes to you by check every six months for 10 years. Both types pay a sound return: 3½%. compounded semi-annually, when held to maturity.

LIVING

Christmas is a wide, wide world. No matter who you are (or where you are), it's the intent behind the observance, rather than its particular devices, that unites many different nations under the Christmas spirit. To show some of the different ways that people all over the globe celebrate the holidays, we asked a diverse group, all members of our decorating department, to cite the national traditions that are faithfully observed each year among their respective families

Theodore Collins: My family's been in North Carolina long enough that now we just celebrate an American Christmas, Southern styleturkey and ham! Since I have four brothers, we have quite a family banquet, once everyone has arrived. That calls for 'all the best,' including silver that Grandmother kept under lock and key

Pete Cano: My father is Cuban, and in Havana they celebrate on Christmas Eve with a roast pig, saffron rice, fried platanos, delicacies imported from Spain. The next day is devoted to services. Santa doesn't come until January, so it's a nice long holiday for children. They get their presents on the Day of the Three Kings, January 6, the old Spanish Epiphany

ENGLAND

Guy Monypenny: I was born in Canada and celebrate an Old English Christmas, as did my forebears: turkey, cranberries with orange, creamed onions, mince pie. We have a traditional guest list of favorite friends and loved relatives, plus a few 'orphans.' Everyone receives a gift, the table is decorated, and the tree is high as the sky

Mary Date: My husband and I follow his family's German traditions at Christmas. But from childhood I recall best the Japanese New Year when everyone becomes a year older at the same time and children are given gifts -always in white paper with red ribbons. And to eat: carp, the sign of good luck, circled by fish cakes for "waves"

Hugh Fettis: To us Scots, the first visitor of the year brings luck, provided he also brings small gifts. The luckiest gift of all: smoked red herring. It's better, too, if the 'first foot' is a man, preferably swarthy. Come who may, if they are empty-handed, they can be turned away. To avoid that, we leave gifts outside for visitors to "bring"

HOME INTERPHONE—In our Phoneland you can talk from room to room, and answer the door, by telephone. New Home Interphone service also lets you relay outside calls and check on a sleeping baby. It saves steps and stairs, helps keep voices down.

EXTENSION PHONES make calling convenient and comfortable for your family wherever you work, sleep and play. Phoneland offers a variety of colors and styles—the familiar wall and table models or the lovely Princess, small in size with light-up dial.

BELL CHIME announces calls with a gracious melodic chime. Why not bring the magic of Phoneland to your home? To do so, or to find out more about these and other modern services, just call the Business Office or ask your telephone man.

BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM

If one could capture the spirit of Christmas in a single phrase, it might very well be the most of everything. The stars have a new twinkle in their eyes, the snow looks like Tiffany's window, and the sky is exactly what Mr. Emerson meant when he called it an azure dome. Tasting ambrosial, cookies are suddenly works of art, looking utterly radiant, houses reel with sheer glitter—or at least ours does. We've devised the most enchanting decorations, trimmed the most glorious trees, planned the most delightful tables. True, the children were a bit shaky with the shears, father discovered his hands were something less than elfin when it came to making tiny roof tops, and some of the gay little trees still drip glue like sap, but it all worked. We're resplendently giddy, the goose hangs high, and the halls are decked as never before to make this the best of all seasons

like the Christmas tree, has become a symbol of the color and the spirit of the season. It is a warm and rewarding tradition to proffer enjoyment-as well as sustenance-to family and friends around the holiday board, where even the simplest fare becomes very special in its festive setting. Admittedly, there are birds and fruits and cakes galore, but we think this season, more than any other, is a feast for the eyes. Everything we behold seems to have a magic touch of fun and gaiety, and the birds and cakes take on excitement from the centerpiece tree and the tableside garlands, the artificial snow and the gold and the silver-all the things that make a table a holiday table. And as there are touches of Christmas all through the house, the holiday table, too, can be multiplied. A small welcoming one just off the entrance hall; a Christmas buffet in the family room; a magnificent formal table in the dining room-each is a festive oasis, a rich and happy reminder of the season. This is the time to let your imagination have the run of the lot, to give your versions of the sugarplum tree and the night before Christmas. Bring in the boughs, real or make-believe, and berries far too bright to eat. Sprinkle glitter with a lavish hand; gather peppermint sticks and silver leaves and golden apples. Just this once, play at being a Christmas Rembrandt—with your crowning masterpiece displayed smack in the middle of what is truly your holiday table.

THE CIFT OF WONDER

h, yes-Christmas was presents, a wondrous tree with tinsel by the yard, the pungent scent of fir and pine, Delia, the cook, red and beaming, full of mystery and meltingly good cookies, my mother sparkling in an aura of happy confusion. Christmas was also snow and stamping horses and sleigh bells, small and tinkling. But more than all of these things together, Christmas was Papa. At Christmastime all else became as paper on the wall; nice paper maybe, but purely background against which the vitality of my father stood out.

Papa had a brilliant mind and imagination, extravagant generosity, tireless energy, and great curiosity, but I believe that it was his sense of wonder, his pure love of living and of all life that drew people to him like a magnet and had us children trailing him around the house like shadows. Being the youngest by several years, I seemed to have a special place in his affections-or thought I did.

If I promised not to speak or move, he would let me sit in the corner of the darkroom while he developed pictures. In the dim red glow I watched with awe how skillfully his hands moved, and how knowingly. I followed him in the garden-even in the rain, "Just what the corn needs today," he would say. I followed him in the sunlight-and we paused to admire a swallow-tailed butterfly on his favorite rose. Proudly, I held the wax for him while he grafted a newly discovered kind of peach onto his very special peach tree.

Papa brought wonder all through the year, but at Christmas wonder rolled through our household like a great wave. Now, when streets grow icy white and stores fill with people, when lights shine from attics to crown suburban evergreens, I begin remembering. . . .

One special Christmas stands out above all others. It began on Christmas Eve, which was for me, aged seven, an occasion. It was time to meet my father's train at the Spuyten Duyvil station in New York City. Delia was helping me on with my red leather boots. I couldn't stand still for excitement, and Delia was patiently trying to button my gray squirrel coat. Just then, Katie, the maid, came downstairs, breathless, to announce that my sisters were not going to the station and I was to go alone-a rare treat. I would sit up on the box with William and hold the loose reins at the end beyond which his capable hands held them taut. And then I heard the sleigh bells. William had Joker and Mr. Bates harnessed to the large sleigh, [continued] large because there would be packages. The horses, eager to go, praneed in the snow, tinkling the bells while William's steadying voice calmed the animals. Up the hill we started, the horses panting and pulling, their steamy breath floating off into the night. Once outside our gate, they broke into a trot; soon the snow was flying and brushing little pinpoints of ice against my face, all of which added to my excitement.

As we slid over the packed snow, bells ajingle, horses steaming, I held the buckle of the reins tightly inside my muff. This was true adventure. I looked up at the sky. The stars were like snowflakes in patterns. The fields of snow seemed endless and a bit lonely as the lantern at the side of the sleigh sent eerie shadows dancing over their whiteness. Around the next bend would be the railroad station lights.

What would my father bring this year? Each year it was something more wondrous than the year before. There was the Christmas of the doll house, taller than I, and complete down to tiny books on bookshelves, silverware, Quimper china, and napkin rings on the table, even green velvet curtains on brass rings, just like those on our library doorway. There was the year of the doll, again larger than I, with real hair, eyelashes on eyes that closed, and a wardrobe.

"The best is none too good," was my father's favorite phrase, and also part of his philosophy. His community was the best, his friends, his family. This always made me stand up taller whenever I went anywhere with him. My father inhabited a realm of good, better, and best. We always had the largest, tallest Christmas tree. The fact that the top had to be cut off so it would fit into the house added to the drama of the occasion. Perhaps four feet, maybe only two—and one year, six; this was the best of all. Evergreen laurel roping, in the days when it was not in the markets, came to us from the South in huge boxes—all part of my father's compliment to those he loved. But this Christmas I was not thinking of these things. I did not analyze my father nor explain him. He was the most exciting person in my life, and meeting him alone on Christmas Eve was a great moment.

William slowed the horses to go down the steep hill to the station. A few other sleighs stood visible in the flickering lanterns. Other horses steamed as their drivers tossed blankets over them. Some stood heads down, waiting patiently. Here and there a driver was swinging his arms to keep warm. The train whistle stirred the waiting group into activity. Blankets were folded, lamps turned up, and snow brushed aside. People climbed down from the train, all with packages, but my heart sank. Where was my father? Quickly my heart lifted again when I saw him way down at the end of the platform. The train man and conductor were both helping him. They piled his mountain of packages on the platform, and the train took off. Papa seized me in his arms, gave me a hug, and set me up on the box in front, then jumped up beside me and took the reins. William sat in back, all but buried under bundles, while we jingled home through the snow. Now my world was complete. Even the horses perked up at my father's touch; prickles of excitement cruised up and down my spine.

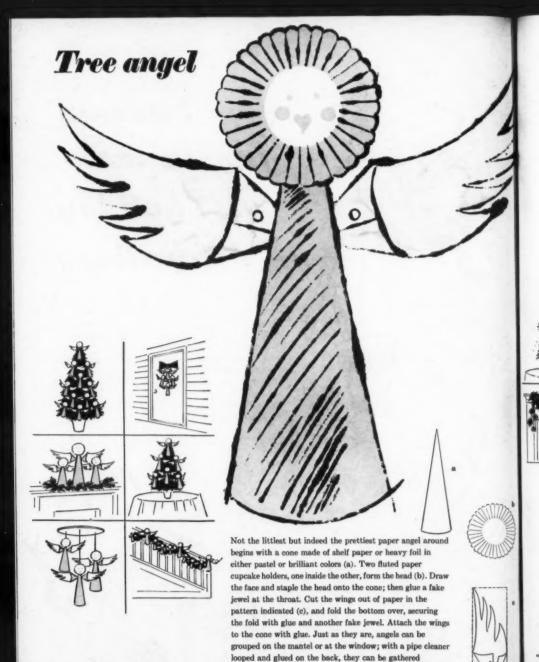

Papa always shopped the afternoon before Christmas. He said no one else went then and he had the stores to himself. As we wound our way along the river road to our house, I tried to guess what those boxes contained, but little did I know at the time how he had come by them. Now and then my father would look down at me, his eyes full of secrets.

The house was a hubbub. My three older sisters were kneedeep in rustling white tissue paper and red ribbon, humming with whispers. Delia was rattling the dumb-waiter cord. That meant dinner. The smell of roast beef and Yorkshire pudding drifted up from the basement kitchen. I suddenly realized that I had never been as hungry as I was right that moment.

That evening was a happy blur of Christmas stories, tinsel, large and sticky popcorn balls, my father nailing laurel around doors and windows, and great wreaths. He never bought wreaths. The best of them were not half large enough to please him, so he always made ours, and we children helped. Our house was rapidly turning into fairyland, a fairyland with a pungent smell of live and growing greenery. Carols came next, with my mother's clear, true soprano voice leading us. My father sang with great verve, completely oblivious to the fact that he was quite off key. And we four joined in with plenty of enthusiasm, if not always with true pitch. After stockings were hung, I was sent up to bed.

Christmas morning, before daylight, we awakened to the sound of reindeer on the roof. The roof was very steep, and in later years I often wondered how Papa managed it. At the time I never doubted that he had some special arrangement with Santa, as he had with everyone who did things for him.

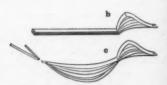

together for a spray, hung from a round piece of heavy wire for a mobile, secured to a wreath, and placed,

not just classically at the top, but all over the tree

DESCRIPTION BY THE UNIVERSELY OF ASSESSED

The bird and the star pictured above combine for soaring and magical decorations. Star is made of cellophane drinking straws, bent almost in helf, brought together, and secured with string or wire (a). Bird begins with two pieces of cardboard and three pieces of ribbon, all 1" wide and 12" long. Stack them together, with one piece of cardboard on the bottom, then two ribbons atop the cardboard, then another piece of cardboard, and finally the third ribbon on the top; staple at one end for the beak. Bend the top piece of cardboard for the head (b). Spread other three pieces to fill in the face and body, then staple neck and tail portion (c). For the tail itself, attach two or three straws, bent almost in half. Wings are cut from shelf paper (d) and glued or stapled to the underside of the top piece of cardboard. With wire attached, birds and stars can fly about the mantel, nestle in a wreath, hang from a most logical mobile, combine with evergreens as a window spray, or sparkle brightly on a table tree

All that glitters on the gala table tree at left is gold-gold mesh scouring pads, to be exact, straight from the kitchen. To elevate the pads from their usual mundane position, unravel them almost completely until you have long springy threads. Wind these threads loosely around a pint-sized artificial table tree-in and out, up, down, and around the tree. For special effects, such as loops and swirls, you'll find that the mesh pads are pliable and hook to themselves and each other as well as to the tree. After the gold threads are on, you may want to spray the tree's stand gold and glue bits of colored glass to its top. Finally, add to the over-all brightness with small candy canes, tiny gift boxes, candles, and ornaments

Gum drops galore

Looking for all the world like a delicious totem pole, the gum drop tree is a delightful way to greet holiday guests. Begin with two triangles (a), about 18" high and 7" across the base, cut out of corrugated cardboard, and a circle with, roughly, a 7" circumference (b). Cut one triangle straight down the middle, from tip to base. Glue the two sides of the split triangle at right angles to the other triangle, one piece to a side (c), then glue the whole shebang to the circle. All cardboard surfaces should be sprayed gold or white. Cut strips of gift ribbon and glue one end to the top of the tree, the other to the bottom-about four strips to a space. Finally, deck the tree with gumdrops (via toothpicks stuck into the holes built into the edge of the cardboard). As with all edible ornaments, have refills on hand

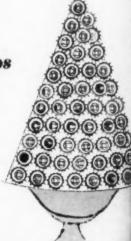

Tree full of goodies

This charming table tree, straight from the land of the Nutcracker, should make you the most popular folks around with the neighborhood children because it's decorated—completely—with candy. It begins with a small artificial tree purchased from a five-and-dime store. Candy canes, gum drops, peppermint drops, sour candies, even ribbon candy are attached to the tree with small wires, tiny ribbons, or curtain hooks, depending upon the shapes of the candies. A candy clown or Santa can top the tree. A word of caution: It's a good idea to have plenty of refills handy

Save those bottle caps

Bottle caps and bits of colored glass, both standbys in any home that shelters small children, form an elegant table tree. Spread a cardboard cone with glue and attach bottle caps, covering the entire surface of the cone (left). Then spray the tree with white paint and, when the paint is dry, glue a tiny piece of colored glass in the center of each cap. Stand is a variation of the flower pot-and-dowel; in this case, it is a compote dish-and-dowel, made the same way

Paper, pins and swirls

Paper pompons cover a cardboard cone for this tree. Take two strips of different colored tissue paper, about 4" wide and 4" long. Fold them one inside the other, lengthwise, then make cuts on the folded side, 1½" deep and about ½" apart (a). Starting at one end, fold the tissue strip over and over on each cut. You will end up with a flat roll, roughly ½" wide and 2" long. Insert a pin through the uncut base, then spread the strips (b). Pin pompons to the cardboard cone (c)

Boxes, boxes everywhere

Make your door say welcome

Strike up the band

To have guests in a caroling mood before they're even in the house, try a musical spray. Make a large bright bow and tie evergreens to it. Then collect all manner of toy musical instruments. Small, light drums, trumpets, bugles—any sort of instrument you like—can be found, circled with wire, and hung gaily from the bow

The postman will ring twice

This bright little spray looks good enough to eat, but woe to any nibbling guest. The "candy canes" are mailing tubes—the variety that bring newspapers and magazines. Spray them white, then wrap them with a spiral of red tape or ribbon and thread wire through the tops. Next, gather a few Christmas balls together with wire through the loops in the back. Secure the "candy canes" and the Christmas balls to a bow decked with evergreens

A box full of cheer

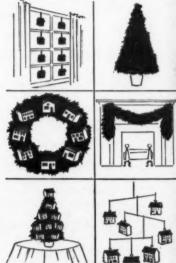

Here is a box literally overflowing with Christmas cheer. Begin with the liveliest, prettiest hatbox you can find. Cut a vertical line down the back, straight to the bottom of the box. Then, at right angles to the cut, mark the middle of the box (the dotted line in diagram a). Separate the sides from the bottom all the way from the cut to that line. Next, cut a piece of wallboard (or heavy cardboard) the length of the midline and the height of the hatbox. Stand the board up on the midline, then fold up the bottom of the hatbox and the separated sides over it and tack it all together (b). Cut away any part of the hatbox that shows above the board. You will have a box round in the front and flat in the back (so that it can be attached to a door). Then fill the hatbox. Evergreens must be present, of course, along with various-sized ornaments, musical instruments, candy canes-all the little things that spell the season. With strong wire, attach box to a large bright bow, then hang the box on the door

And all through the house

These little cardboard houses can take you on a fanciful trip to Scandinavia. They're constructed from two pieces of cardboard cut, folded, and pasted together. Windows and doors can be colored paper cutouts or they can be drawn on, whichever you prefer. The houses can be white with red roofs (spray paint again can be utilized), red with white roofs, or any color combination that strikes your fancy. You might attach the houses to the evergreen-covered streamers of a large ribbon; hang them in the window; use them to ornament trees, wreaths, and garlands; or dangle them from a wire-and-dowel mobile frame

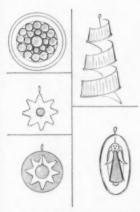

Pine-scented Christmas

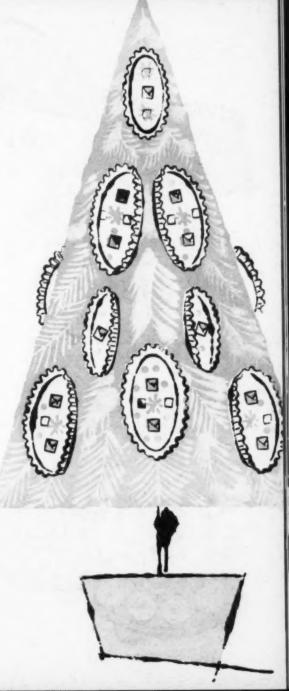

Pine cones make decorations of pure winter, whether sprayed gilt or bright colors and sprinkled with glitter or left in their natural state (and then, perhaps, sprinkled with artificial snow). Below, they are combined with evergreens for a wreath. Frame of the wreath is made of four pieces of wire bent into a circle with a fifth piece (a). Evergreens and pine cones are then attached to this frame (b). Pine cones can also be hung on a table tree. Or they can be combined with evergreens, gathered into a spray, and attached to a garland-either singly and at various points along the garland or in large swags at both ends

Look to the pots and pans

Disposable foil pans and potato baking. boats work so well as Christmas decorations that one almost thinks the designers had it in mind. Use them in their original form or cut them into various shapes. You might cut the raised stars out of Alcoa pans and experiment with corkscrews and a limitless number of other designs. (Be sure to wear gloves when cutting this heavy-duty foil.) Glue fake jewels, pieces of colored glass, even bits of broken mirror and bright buttons on the surfaces. Small candles and angels fit perfectly in the potato boats. When the ornaments are wired to evergreens, they add gaiety and glitter to mantel, door, and window. You can also hang the foil ornaments on a small table tree for a charming centerpiece or on a full-sized tree for the magnificent effect at right

There are people who insist that the holiday season isn't really official without Christmas bells. We lean a bit toward that view; hence the ones on this page, made of ice cream cones. Spray them gilt (or some bright color) and decorate them prettily with fake jewels, sequins, and pasta. Clapper is made of a pipe cleaner inserted at one end into a bead and at the other end through the top of the cone and wrapped around a curtain ring (a). Hang the bells on trees, wreaths, and garlands—or tie a bright ribbon to the curtain ring and gather three or four into a bow

ROOM-SIZED GIFT PACKAGES

There are certain outrageous victories in the battle of the sexes for which we have a sneaking admiration. Our favorite is that of the man who gave his wife a power lawn mower for Mother's Day, only to cry touche when the lady retaliated by giving him a sidesaddle for his birthday. We hasten to add that this curious parable is applicable to the home—our chief concern—only in that it need never be gifted in a roundabout manner; if it needs a new floor or a new sofa or a change of scene in the drapery department, it says so. And what better time to give than at Christmas? Then, more than at any other time of the year, the spirit is on us; we all feel slightly reckless, so why not a little disciplined extravagance by way of a new rug? Or, if the budget will keep pace with the impulse, an entire new room? Constant as they are, houses tire; they have to be amused, and there is no surer tickler than the domestic equivalent of a new hat, whether it be a mere beanie or a plumed wonder. On the following pages you will see how revivifying (grass and horses aside) the art of giving a gift to the home can be—to the home and to you.

Why not gift the garage?

Most garages take to exploitation like ducks to water; this one turned into a family-room swan, and a charmer. Its one weak point, an inadequate little window, was scotched via a bold and imaginative window treatment that makes much of a checkered fabric (table cloth material, actually) used to upholster the chairs. The repetition of the pattern in the flooring is a stroke of minor but cunning genius

Gifts for a room to grow on

Like Rome, and very literally, no room is built in anything like a day. Given the average pocketbook, some can take years, but to the perfectionist, the collector, and the purist, the wait is worth it. Here, in this little treasure house, we have the elegance of patina, grain, and line that makes old cabinetry so endearing. Its coupling with so much intense color is unusual and doubly effective because of the pure white walls and the classic draperies

HOLIDAY HOUSE

For 12 months of the year, it is imbued with the spirit of enjoyment

In a compact, highly functional plan, the "socializing" area is wrapped around the living room's huge, triangular fireplace. A drying room—a must for wet ski clothes—is very sensibly located directly opposite the entrance and warmed to a T by the furnace and hot water heater. Kitchen is a simple, workable galley one step from the built-in dining table; the two downstairs bedrooms share a bath; a ship's-ladder-staircase ascends to second story, three bedrooms, two partial baths we choosing a house for Santa Claus, this would be it. Located in Wilmington, Vermont, near Mount Snow, a beautiful and very popular ski area, its site is polar-esque in winter, which is as it should be, and its design—two identical "A" forms that intersect each otherprovides a superb roller coaster for a sleigh and deer. For lesser saints, however, it is a home for anyone—a yearround holiday house for skiing in winter, rusticating in summer. Designed for himself by architect Bruce Graham, it is not merely a pleasure dome; durable materials and sound insulation guarantee complete comfort for anyone who might want nothing more than simply to live in Vermont for 365 days a year. At the moment, it is enjoyed only intermittently by the owner and by vacationing "tenant"-friends, who make it a very pleasant source of income. With five bedrooms, a full bath, and two lavatories, it is an accommodating house: a widened and deepened brook flowing under one of the decks is ideal for swimming in July and skating in January; winter or summer, strategically placed glass areas, including a soaring triangle in the two-story living room, capture a vista of the magnificent Vermont countryside wearing a garment that varies from flowers to snowy glitter.

Hooded with black iron, the island fireplace has a "floating" hearth of fieldstone high enough off the floor to form a triangular warming bench, a vital asset to weathering a Vermont winter. Circled around it are three built-in bunk-sofas for extra guests; facing it is a panorama to inspire Grandma Moses

2. A-frame houses, by the nature of their design, almost always combine an extraordinary exterior sweep with an interior pattern of beams and rafters that is Gothically elaquent. That is why the living room, for all its basic simplicity and walls of barn-siding, has a definite, unrustic feeling of grandeur

3. The upper-level bedrooms are nestled against the slope of the roof in a cozy-corner snugness that makes ducking into bed a great pleasure—particularly ofter a day of ice, snow, and slaloming. There is no sense of cramp, however; two of the bedrooms each hold two guests comfortably; the third houses three

4. A triangular dining table with a folding "fin" to conserve passage space is built in against the wall adjacent to the galley kitchen. Service is comparatively simple for seated dining for six; when the guest list expands, the table becomes a buffet, people eat where they like—usually around the fireplace

5. The perfect balance and geometric nicety of the house extend to such precise details as an open staircase of the ship's-ladder type placed exactly at the center of the house and the subtle but studied repetition of the shape of the room's upper-level gable-end in the design of the triangular fireplace hood

IESSIERIC We'll be the first to admit that a flaming plum pudding adds a spectacular end to a holiday meal. But haven't you sometimes wished for another finishing touch, just for variety? We nominate oranges angelique for the place of honor-holiday time or anytime during the year. They're not too heavy, not too sweet-and definitely festive to look at. You can even flambe it, if you wish: Heat an extra spot of brandy, ignite, and pour onto the oranges. It's dramatic as all get out!

6 large navel oranges

12 pitted dates 12 dried fign 14 cup raisins 1/2 cup blanched almonds

12 cup grated coconut

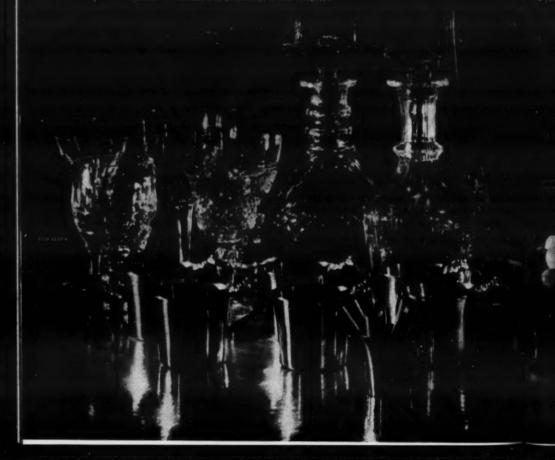

14 cup brandy

- Slice off stem end of the orange and cut notches around the opening.
- Spoon out orange pulp and reserve for filling.
- · Chop dates, figs, raisins, and almonds.
- Combine with coconut, orange pulp, and brandy.
- Spoon filling into orange shells and place in shallow pan.
- Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) for 30 minutes. Serve hot.
- Yield: 6 servings.

If you like to experiment, set your imagination to work and try variations of both fruits and liqueurs. As an example, for ananas angeliques, fill halved fresh pineapple with chopped pineapple, prunes, coconut, pecans, and cherries mixed with kirsch or white crème de menthe. Or for pamplemousse angelique, use a half grapefruit filled with dried apricots or peaches, pecans, raisins, and grenadine.

by Lillian Langseth-Christensen

Instead of a nest of robins in its hair, it wears a child's dream of Christmas cookies, pretty as pictures, unbelievably good to eat

The history of Christmas baking is a simple one: The baking came first and the Christian feast of Christmas came later. The early pagans celebrated the winter solstice by peparing animal figures, little suns, and symbols of the object they worshiped and made sacrifice to. They pressed the fures into molds and either dried or baked them. Even the pretzel and the wreath are descended from old symbols of sun and plenty. When the pagans were Christianized, the baking continued, and many of the forms baked today date back to the Middle Ages. On the continent, the flat cakes are often called printen, since rolling them out was very like the printing process. Dated molds have been found that place many of the little cookie shapes we admire and use today as far back as 1400.

With the Christianized cookie came the Christmas tree and, eventually, the Cookie Tree, shown on the next page. At its mots are the basic recipes from which all the traditional Christmas sweets descend. There are hard cookies and crisp ginger-bread figures, which made the first decorated Christmas trees—long before inedible tinsel came into style—as delicious as they were pretty. There are also recipes for the smaller, softer, and more fragile cookies, which were piled gently into gay little paper cornucopias and tied to the tree among the festoons of almond rings and cinnamon stars and gay little gingerbread men.

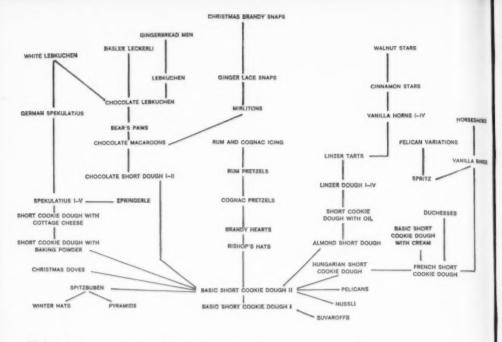

These delicacies all took time, of course, and as that commodity became more and more precious, homemakers began to substitute tree decorations that could be used again and again. At first, they were imitations of all the good things that had hung on the trees in the past. A generation of children went through a period of frustration while they were being taught that the magar pretzels were only painted cloth filled with cotton and that the little net bags held tinted plaster, not luscious sugarplums. After that, Christmas tree ornamentation went on to anything and everything, up to and including ermine tails. Then, at a point of seemingly no return, the living pine Christmas tree trimmed with lovely confections came back into fashion. It has great advantages: The tree is denuded gradually, and when the time comes to take it down, it is usually bare, with only an out-of-reach cookie or two left at the top. There is no storage problem, no enormous boxes labeled "Christmas Tree Ornaments" to be put away for another year. Gingerbread and cut-out cookies of trees and Santa Clauses come but once a year, but the same dough and mixtures can be used for any holiday or any season.

The urge to bake for Christmas is still strong, but there are very few homemakers who can set whole days aside for baking at the busiest time of the year. Nor do they have to; with beaters, refrigerators, and freezers, doughs can be made in advance and refrigerated; cookies can be baked early in the month and frozen until needed. The work can be spread out and divided, and in the end, only an afternoon and evening are needed for baking the fragile ones and packing the gifts. And these few hours are well spent, as they perfume the house with the lovely smell of baking that should usher in each Christmas season.

When cookies are planned for tree decorations, they can be baked with a little loop of colored twine pressed into the dough or they can be tied to the tree with ribbons. Pretzels, rings, and wreaths can be strung in chains, meringue cookies can be strung with a needle and heavy thread. Vanilla horns, suvaroffs, mirlitons, and similar delicacies have to be put into cornucopias or little bags or boxes, since many if not most of them would break in the process of being tied to the tree. Guard their fragility,

If it is to be a Cookie Christmas Tree this year, choose a small tree and make a variety of cookies so you may offer an ornament to the taste of anyone who stops in to help you eat your tree. And always remember, the cookie came first, then Christmas.

CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS YOU CAN MAKE

Trees, garlands, mistletoe chandeliers—these are but a few of the Christmas decorations that a bit of imagination and ordinary materials can contrive. Here we show how to make the bare bones of a few basic designs. You can go on to decorate as your fancy dictates.

For stability, decorative table trees should be anchored in a container. Here, a repainted flower pot is used. Cover hole on underside of pot, then mix plaster of Paris. A dowel, same size as hole, is placed in center of pot and anchored in bottom hole. Plaster sets quickly and you are ready to make your Christmas tree

Four-sided pyramid tree is also made of posterboard. Cut a 40" by 60" piece of board to a 40" square. Draw diagonal lines corner to corner. Draw a square around center point proportioned to size of pot (in this case it is a 6" square). From the corners of the square draw lines to corners of posterboard. Cut esulting star-shaped figure with knife and score lightly along center square for folding. Fold to top point and tape edges to create solid cone. Cut hole in base to dowel size. Decorate cone and put over dowel, which holds cone firmly in place

Stockings were explored; little farry animals spilled out, nuts, may private scissors, an infinitesimal jackknife, Japanese parasols is miniature, and puzzles.

All was interrupted by steaming giddle cakes and sausage. While cake at wondering looks toward the library, because that's where Christmas really was, and dis morning the curtains were tightly drawn. The fire crackling in the dining room warmed the backs of my legs and I ate in a fervor of impatience. When my father and mother finished the last mouthful, the moment had come.

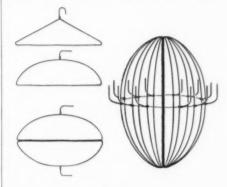

My father rose and with a flourish drew the curtains aside. They squeaked gently on their thick wooden rod-and the library was revealed. He turned a switch, and everyone gasped. It was no longer a room. Gone was all the furniture, and before us, filling the area completely, was a bit of Norway, small scale-Norway, complete with cottages, barns, trains, and blinking lights. There were snow-covered mountains and tiny cows with great bells. There were streams fringed with beautiful icicles; there were lakes and rivers of glass. Sleighs dimbed hilly roads, people shopped, and skiers skied. All sorts of little witches controlled the trains, and lights went on and off in the houses. When we had explored every detail. I could tell by my father's look that there was more to come. He turned another switch, and fine powdery snow gently sifted down over the village. Another gasp came from all of us, including Katie and Delia in the doorway and William standing behind them.

We were spellbound. It was siryland; it couldn't be real. Tather's eyes abone with the wonéw of it, and his smile crinkled the omers of his eyes. Norway became our world that day. We never left it, neither my sisters and I nor my father and mother.

It was several years later that I larned how he and my Mother had stayed up all night to put the village together, and how he had sequired it in the first place. Best & Co., then on Thirty-fourth Street, was the source of marvelous children's toys. My father merely had the ingenuity to walk up to the manager the afternoon before Christmas and ask him what he was planning to do with the Norse villages that filled all his Fifth Avenue windows!

HOW TO MAKE A KISSING BALL

The unusual, conversation-piece ornament on page 77 is easily and quickly made from 12 wire coat hangers, picture wire, candles, Christmas greens, and a sprig of mistletoe. First, bend coat hangers into an arc, as shown, and with pliers turn the handle to form a spike. Place the 12 straight backs in tangency and lash tightly together with picture wire. Weave greens around and through the openings and attach to wire hangers where necessary. Cut bobcches of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Force candles onto heated spikes, being careful that the flame clears the greens. Ribbon attached to top can be suspended from a hook or a door frame, making a chandelier.

HOW TO MAKE A STAR TREE

Tree of plastic stars on page 75 is made of dowels, \(\frac{4}{2}'' \) for branches. The stock can be nailed to a round board or embedded in a pot of plaster. Branches are cut to tree shape and nailed to stock. Holly leaves or artificial leaves can be attached to the branches with thin wire. Stars are made from a kit, designed by Dru Dunn, with plastic crystals and color capsules that are oven-baked in star-shaped cookie molds. The unusual kit is by Meltamold

At Christmastime, when I remember Papa, the fabulous presents make wonderful stories, practically legends for the grand-children. The toys, of course, have gone the way of all toys. But there is so much that remains. My father's bountiful enthusiasm, his love of life, his dealing always with the best and expecting the best—these were some of his lasting gifts to those he loved. Perhaps the greatest gift of all, something that living with him built into my very being, was his sense of wonder.

And now, it is the night before Christmas. The snow drifts down, the fire glows, stockings hang ready, and we are reading to a small visitment of the stocking and the stocking stocking the child in the Manger. When I feel my grandchild warm at my side and see his shining eyes as he is caught in the magic of the Christmas story. I too am caught and held by something that sitrs deep within me. I feel my father very near, and in my bear! I thank him for this greatest gift of all. $\frac{1}{2}$
